DEATH OF MRS. BURT

AFTER INTENSE SUFFERING SHE PASSED AWAY LAST NIGHT

Mrs. O. L. Burt, of 1020 North Central avenue, who was so terribly burned yesterday noon, died last night after hours of intense suffering. The funeral services will be held tomorrow, 2:00 p. m., at the Little Church of the Flowers. Interment in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Burt's maiden name was Julia M. Wine. She was born Feb. 28, 1873, and was therefore a little past 46 years of age. She married O. R. Burt in 1892 in Centralia, Ill. The family moved to Glendale in 1912. Mrs. Burt was in poor health at the time and she soon began to have days of unconsciousness from which it was difficult to awaken her. She seemed to finally recover from this, but about three months ago she was badly hurt in an auto accident and her sufferings affected her mind.

Mrs. Burt is survived by her husband and four sons, one of whom, Fred, but recently returned from overseas. She was a member of the Christian Church for many years. Rev. C. A. Cole will officiate at the funeral services.

OUTING AT BALBOA

Mr. and Mrs. William Justema and their son Billy were Fourth of July guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Clark of Oak street at Balboa. It was Mrs. Justema's first visit to that beach and she was delighted with it, though they had to maneuver to find a good place to park their car on account of the great crowd of people there. On Sunday Billy was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Witman and family, who have recently come from the Imperial Valley and who is a brother-in-law of Mr. Pelley and is assisting him in the manufacture of candy.

MAKE AUTO TRIP

MR. AND MRS. LEE KASTER WILL MOTOR TO SANTA BARBARA FOR VACATION

This is the week when the Los Angeles wholesale houses give their traveling men a vacation and merchants co-operate by ordering their supplies over the telephone or by mail. Lee Kaster, of 806 South Maryland avenue, is going to make his rest time the more enjoyable by taking an auto trip, accompanied by his wife, to Santa Barbara and beyond. They will travel slowly and camp out at night.

BEACH PARTY

A jolly party of friends which spent four days together at Long Beach returned in part Monday. It included Mrs. E. W. Kingsley and son, Edward, Jr., Gordon and Marvin Kingsley and their grandfather, N. A. Johnston; Mr. and Mrs. John King, of California avenue, their son Kenneth and daughter Genevieve; Mrs. McGibbon, her daughter Lilias and son Bradley and her sister Mrs. Hewitt; Ruby Farnsworth, Miss Pearl Tyler, Hazel and Elsie Tyler. They went to the New Tent City which they found a delightful place, very comfortable and reasonable. Mrs. Kingsley and family remained for the rest of the week.

ROYALLY ENTERTAINED

MRS. D. R. CALLENDER AND DAUGHTER, KANSAS CITY, RECIPIENTS OF MUCH ATTENTION

Mrs. D. R. Callender and her daughter, Miss Louise Callender, sister-in-law and niece of Mrs. Colin Cable, whose house guests they are, are being much entertained and having an altogether delightful introduction to Southern California. Last Thursday they and Mrs. Cable were luncheon guests at the home of Mrs. Helen Bennett and her daughter, Gertrude Bennett, of Manhattan Place, the luncheon being followed by an auto ride and theatre party. Saturday Mrs. Cable entertained for them with a luncheon at which covers were laid for Mrs. Bennett and her daughter, Mrs. Charles Bosserman, of La Porte, Ind., Mrs. LeRoy Bosserman and Mrs. L. V. Ashton of Glendale. Monday they were guests of Mrs. LeRoy Bosserman on an auto trip to the beaches and picnic luncheon. Today they are luncheon guests of Mrs. William Nichols of the Monte Vista apartments on Hawthorne street, and Friday they will be entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Haskell Lapham. Mrs. Cable is planning for festivities in their honor next week.

L. G. BRAMBLE CLEARED

FOUND "NOT GUILTY" OF VIOLATING SPEED LAWS BY JURY OF 3 WOMEN AND 5 MEN

Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the Recorder's Court was tried the case of L. G. Bramble, arrested at 6 a. m., June 22d, for speeding at the rate of 35 miles an hour at the junction of San Fernando Road and Colorado street. The defendant had been arrested by Officer W. E. Trautman and at the preliminary hearing demanded trial by jury.

Ten persons were called for jury duty, viz., H. A. Wilson, J. W. Henry, W. H. Bullis, O. Fish, R. M. McGee, Mrs. Frank Dickman, T. L. Brown, Mrs. Maude M. Potter, H. M. Morton and Mrs. C. W. Burket. W. H. Bullis and H. M. Morton were excused, leaving a jury of eight of which three were women.

The prosecution was conducted by a representative from the office of the District Attorney in Los Angeles, and Attorney James McBryde, of this city, represented the defendant.

The officer testified that according to his stop watch defendant was traveling at the rate of 35 and a fraction miles an hour, but witnesses for the defense claimed that the speedometer on the machine did not record that speed and that Bramble was not exceeding the speed limit permitted under the state law which in this case defendant's attorney claimed should take precedence of the city ordinance because San Fernando Road is a state highway.

The jury was out between ten and fifteen minutes and brought in a verdict of not guilty. On the first ballot all voted "not guilty," save one, and when that one stated the reasons on which the vote was based they were found to be due to a misunderstanding which was cleared up and the second ballot was unanimous.

One of the women jurors said she hesitated to serve because she felt prejudiced against defendant's case and feared she might not do it justice, but the evidence convinced her that Bramble had no intent to violate the law and that, in fact, he was not violating the speed limits permitted by the state.

SURPRISED AT CRIME

HARRY S. NEW'S NEIGHBORS SAY HE WAS QUIET HARDWORKING YOUNG MAN

Nowhere did the report of the murder by Harry S. New cause greater surprise than among his neighbors on El Bonito avenue in this city. One of them, in commenting on the sad affair, said: "He was one of the last men of whom I would have expected such a deed. Everybody liked him. He was a hard working young fellow, regular in his habits and nearly always at home when not at work, kind and helpful about the house. He must have been insane when he did it."

LORRAINE A. HARRISON

Miss Lorraine A. Harrison, who has for several weeks been the guest of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Baker, of 311 West Colorado street, has returned to her home in San Francisco to await notice of the itinerary assigned her, for she has been engaged by the California Syndicate to sing at the moving picture houses which it controls up and down the coast. Whether she will open at San Francisco or Seattle she does not yet know.

Mrs. Baker has this week been entertaining her brother, S. Winston Harrison, a college boy who has been attending the University of the Pacific at San Jose, but who is going to Stanford next year. She hopes that next month her father will be with her.

G. G. D. A. ADJOURNS FOR SUMMER

At the meeting of the Greater Glendale Development Association, held Tuesday evening in the library of the Intermediate School, a decision was reached to suspend all meetings (subject to the call of the president) until September 1st. In the meantime should matters of importance arise, members of the association can be called together.

MERRILL BURKE AND BRIDE HAVE RETURNED HOME

Merrill Burke and his bride, who was Miss Bessie Van Osdoll, arrived at home Sunday from a two weeks' honeymoon trip by auto, in which they spent several days in Yosemite National Park. They have taken one of the De Luxe apartments, corner Brand and California avenue, where they will be at home to their friends.

LEAGUE CAMPAIGN TO START IN TWO WEEKS

PRESIDENT WILSON WILL VISIT THIS COAST AND WILL REVIEW NEW PACIFIC FLEET

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Formal announcement was made at the White House today that President Wilson will start the campaign in the United States in behalf of the League of Nations in about two weeks. His trip will take him to the Pacific Coast where he expects to review the newly formed Pacific fleet.

Secretary Daniels has announced that the new Pacific fleet will leave Hampton Roads for San Diego July 19. It is said that the secretary plans to sail with the fleet but if unable to do so will join it at San Diego. It is also reported that the navy board is already on the Pacific coast planning for the fleet's arrival and arranging to meet its needs when it gets here.

Secretary Daniels' western plans include a trip to Hawaii and an inspection of Pearl Harbor.

The Pacific fleet will be the biggest naval force that has ever passed through the Panama canal.

The president is planning to keep himself always accessible to the Senate committees during the peace treaty discussion. In this connection it was pointed out that a suggestion had been made that the president be called before the Senate Foreign Relations committee to testify.

It is the president's intention to confer this afternoon with several of the Senate leaders and he is scheduled for an address before the Senate tomorrow. His speech is finished except for a final review.

R-34 TO LEAVE TOMORROW

BELIEVED THAT WEATHER CONDITIONS WILL THEN BE FAVORABLE FOR RETURN FLIGHT

MINEOLA, July 9.—Following the receipt of advices from the United States Weather Bureau that the British dirigible R-34 would better start the return flight via the southern course within the next twenty-four hours, Commander Scott announced positively that he would leave at four o'clock tomorrow morning. It is believed that conditions will then be highly favorable. They were unfavorable this morning.

GOVERNMENT CONTESTS OIL LAND CLAIMS

RIGHTS OF HONOLULU CONSOLIDATED OIL COMPANY IN CALIFORNIA FIELD ARE QUESTIONED

WASHINGTON, July 9.—A hearing in the government's contest of the rights of the Honolulu Consolidated Oil Company to valuable Kern county and other California oil lands, began today before Secretary Lane of the Interior Department.

The company claims it has a right to the land because it started development before the land was withdrawn from public settlement for the use of the navy. The government contends that only one, and that an unimportant "test hole," was drilled in the property. The indications are that the hearing will be concluded tomorrow.

ORGANIZING FOR HOT FIGHT

ADVOCATES AND OPPONENTS OF PEACE TREATY AND LEAGUE OF NATIONS AWAIT PRESIDENT'S SPEECH

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Every Senator of both parties has received notice from party leaders to be in attendance at all sessions of Congress beginning Thursday in preparation for the League of Nations and peace treaty fight. Those who are forced to be absent will have suitable pairs arranged so that test votes will not be affected. The Democrats are eager to have the President deliver a forceful, uncompromising address when he appears before the Senate tomorrow believing that such an address would help to silence the opposition.

League opponents eagerly await the President's address expecting that it will give them a cue as to his methods in fighting for the League. Both sides are organizing for what is probably the hottest fight the Senate ever saw.

LANSING TO LEAVE PARIS FRIDAY

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Announcement was made today that Secretary Lansing of the Department of State will leave Paris for the United States, Friday.

ARMY OF OCCUPATION RETURNING

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Unoffical reports received here today stated that the American army of Occupation composed of the first five regular army divisions has started on the homeward movement. The fifth division, it is reported, is now embarking at Brest.

SOLVES PROBLEM

DR. C. STUART STEELMAN DEVELOPS TRUE BINOCULAR STEREOSCOPIC CAMERA

Dr. C. Stuart Steelman has applied for letters patent on a binocular stereoscopic camera he has developed which promises to revolutionize photography. It is an achievement long desired and earnestly sought. The doctor is by no means the only student of the problem, but by reason of his knowledge of the human eye and its artificial aids he brought an unusual equipment of knowledge and understanding to the task.

In normal human sight, as the doctor explains it, we see by what is termed the "third division." We look with both eyes at an object, but instead of seeing two images the two are fused into one by nature's stereoscope. This enables the vision to take in not only the object itself but its contour and surroundings. In other words, to see around it in a measure and to see other objects related to it in their true proportions. This fusing of the double image gives perspective, distance and depth.

In photography the third division has never been perfected. The camera has been, so to speak, a one-eyed instrument. To that fact is due the flatness, the lack of depth and perspective, the blurring of details beyond the point of focus. That is the reason why the group picture is so often imperfect and why objects in the immediate foreground often loom so large in comparison with more distant ones.

The doctor has worked it out along the line of the human vision by means of lenses and certain mechanism designed to bring about the fusing of the two images before they reach the plate or film which records the composite image. This will give true distinct outlines at all distances.

It should prove not only wonderful in portrait work but in all the uses to which photography is applied, especially in motion picture work, and in commercial work where pictures of interiors are desired. Every amateur knows that though his eyes can take in practically a whole room the camera can record only a part,—a nook here and there. It is one-eyed and cannot see much at a time.

The doctor's camera will not be a large affair in spite of its ingenious mechanism. His model has been tested to the satisfaction of friends who are interested with him in the production of a genuine stereoscopic camera. He has been delayed because of difficulty in getting the special lenses which had to be secured in the east and ground according to his prescription, but a sufficient demonstration has been made to warrant the application for letters patent, and the doctor hopes before long to be in a position to make a more public exhibition which will prove that he has solved one of the great problems of photography. The other great problem is color photography from a commercial standpoint. Great strides have been made along that line but it is not yet commercially practicable.

TO RESUME WORK

EMPLOYES OF L. A. SHIPBUILDING COMPANY LOSE MILLION IN WAGES

Of interest to some Glendale residents is the announcement of the officials of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company that the plant will endeavor to resume work today. There has been a strike on for six weeks, during which time the men have lost more than a million dollars in wages. Whether or not any of the union men striking will go back to work is problematical, but their leaders will try to hold all of them to the agreement to stay out. It is a sad pity that some way cannot be devised whereby employers and employes may work together like brothers and settle all disputes without hard feeling.

A SATISFIED PATRON

When the telephone receiver was taken down in response to a ring at the Glendale Evening News office Monday forenoon a pleasant voice at the other end of the line began to pour forth praises of the News as an advertising medium. It was Mrs. Alice Bahrenburg who has sold her home and is disposing of some of her effects. One small white elephant on her hands was a collection of several hundreds of fruit jars and jelly glasses which she advertised and within two hours after the paper began to circulate enough buyers had visited her to clean out her stock. She is now trying the News columns for other things.

FROM FRESNO COUNTY

MISS MATTHIESEN AND MOTHER FORMERLY OF GLENDALE VISIT HERE

Mrs. F. V. Matthiesen and daughter, Miss Ruth Matthiesen of Parlier, Fresno county, are spending several weeks here as the guests of Frank Matthiesen, of North Jackson street, Bert Matthiesen of Cedar street, and Herbert Matthiesen of Adams street, and their families. Mrs. Matthiesen and daughter moved from Glendale about a year and a half ago and there are no immediate hopes of their returning here to live, as they are very well satisfied at Parlier, where Miss Matthiesen has a good position in the First National Bank. Parlier is surrounded by a rich agricultural section and everything is prosperous in that region. The ladies expect to spend some time at beach and mountain resorts in Southern California before returning home.

LAWN PARTY

The young Business Men's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church entertained the J. O. C. class with a lawn party Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Cluett, 526 East Windsor Road.

This being the time of the regular monthly business meeting, a short business session was held preceding the evening's entertainment.

Games of various kinds were indulged in until a late hour, after which refreshments were served and the guests departed for their homes, all expressing themselves as having spent a pleasant evening. About 40 were present.

B. P. Y. U. MEETING

Members of the Baptist Young People's Union to the number of about twenty were entertained at the home of the superintendent, Mrs. G. H. Rowe, 216 South Orange street, Tuesday evening. The program included a lesson on the effects of nicotine, a short parliamentary drill, the preparation of some postal cards for the Children's Hospital in Los Angeles, a few games and refreshments of ice-cream and cake. Plans were made for a picnic supper at Echo Park at the next meeting in August.

MRS. MEAGHER SURPRISED

A very pleasant surprise was given Mrs. Thomas Meagher of Garfield avenue, last week, when a beautiful new Chevrolet touring car was presented to her as a birthday gift from her husband. Several trips of interest have already been taken in it. The latter part of July they will visit Yosemite Valley, with a party of friends.

SUPPER TO BE COOKED AND SERVED BY MEN

There's going to be something doing at Central Christian Church this evening. The men of the church, headed by A. L. Lawshe, chief cook and general manager, with Clifford A. Cole, able first assistant, will provide, cook and serve the regular church night supper. The men are not strangers at this kind of work, taking their turns occasionally with the women in the delightful occupation.

COMPLETE SURPRISE

MISS ELOISE FRANCY TAKEN OFF HER GUARD BY FRIENDS WHO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY

Miss Eloise Francy was very thoroughly surprised Tuesday evening when she returned to her home at 136 North Kenwood street, about 8 o'clock, after being away for the afternoon. She came in an auto and ran into the house to ask her mother if she did not wish to take a little spin in the car and when she opened the door found the parlor filled with relatives and friends who had gathered to celebrate her birthday and realized that she had been pleasantly trapped.

After a very pleasant evening of music and games a handsome birthday cake and several other cakes were cut and served with ice-cream. Guests who participated in the celebration were: Miss Virginia Dunn of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor of Glendale, Mr. and Mrs. Herman and small son of Burbank, Mr. and Mrs. Staub and family, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Francy, Mr. and Mrs. Nunn, and Miss Engle of Glendale. Miss Francy was the recipient of beautiful birthday remembrances.

WATER! WATER!

A portion of West Lankershim, which was recently annexed to Los Angeles, is in hard straits for an adequate water supply and a number of its citizens have appealed to the Board of Public Service Commissioners for at least temporary aid. An offer was made to turn over to the city, free of charge, the West Lankershim water distributing system, if connections with the city system can be made. The subject was referred to Chief Engineer Mulholland for his recommendation.—Lankershim Laconic.

TESTING ONE'S CREDULITY

One can't help wondering what sort of people answer the ads that virtually read like this:

"Wanted—Somebody to draw a salary, and nothing else whatever. No ability, brains, training, experience, capital, canvassing, writing or work of any kind necessary. We furnish everything to start with and pay you steen dollars per day from the very minute you begin to think about the job."—Strickland Gillilan.

Probably the readers of high-class magazines, the handsome heroes of whose romantic stories are always accepting such positions from generous and mysterious strangers. They have the same air of probability.

FOOD NEEDS OF ANIMALS DIFFER WITH THEIR WORK

The primary functions of food are to repair the waste of the body, to promote growth in immature animals, and to furnish heat and energy. And for these purposes only the digestible portion of the food is to be taken into account. The amount of digestible protein fat, and carbohydrates in a ration is an indication of its fitness to fulfill these purposes. The next question is, how much of these materials does an animal require, and in what proportion should they be given? This differs with the purpose for which the animal is kept, whether it is growing, being fattened, used for work, or making milk. An animal standing in the stall requires less food nutrients than one which is worked hard every day. That is, in drawing heavy loads the animal breaks down or consumes a certain amount of muscular tissue, which must be replaced by protein in the food, and it uses energy or force which is also furnished by the food nutrients. In standing in the barn it still requires some protein, fat, and carbohydrates to perform the necessary functions of the body to maintain heat in winter, to grow a new coat of hair, etc. But if it is fed the same ration as when working hard, the tendency is to get fat or waste the food.

"DUTY, HONOR, COUNTRY," AS ARMY SLOGAN

Coded form may change; the first principles for soldierly conduct are immutable. That, in other words, is what Lieutenant General Bullard told the West Point graduates of 1919 in that part of his address devoted to regulations and the man. When he became an officer, the general said, he learned the regulations by heart. Then the powers repealed and revised them. The same thing happened again and again. Finally he threw the book over and fixed his code in three words: Honor, Duty, Country.

"They fit in everywhere," said the general, commending these words to the cadets, and he added, "I have never got into trouble by not knowing the regulations."

Three words which can thus substitute for a whole set of rules have to be of fine significance. But the finest thing, after all, about the terms cited at West Point is that they do not cease to do their bit when they are taken out of a military application. If they give to the soldier that necessity of his calling, something stable and steadfast to stand by, they offer not less to the civilian, whether in private or in public life. They do, indeed, "fit in everything." We can fancy a statesman with the real worth and dignity of his trust upon him preferring honor, duty and country to considerations of party, place and selfish power.

Militarism, qualified by General Bullard's terms, confirms itself as a mainstay, not a menace, to the land. On lines of honor, duty and country armies of soldiers and civilians merge into one mighty host of high principled citizenship. The West Pointers who listened to this year's commencement speaker could have heard nowhere a more soldierly upholding of citizenly ideals.—New York World.

CHILDREN ARE NOT "NATURALLY CRUEL"

It is a very general belief that children are naturally cruel, and one frequently hears such phrases as "the cruelty of children," or "all children are cruel, but they outgrow it," as if cruelty were like helplessness, or simplicity, an attribute of childhood, inseparable from the state of infancy.

A cruel nature, of course, shows itself as such in infancy, as a generous one will show generosity, or a lazy one indolence; but, cruelty in itself, that is, enjoyment in causing or witnessing suffering, is not a characteristic of childhood.

The baby who plays with a kitten, holding it up by its tail, or clutching its fur, crowing with delight at the little creature's cries of pain, is not cruel, because it has no idea that it is inflicting pain.

Even the older child who chases the butterfly, crushing it to death in a hot little hand, is not cruel, for he also is too ignorant to know what suffering he has caused.

Let no tender-hearted mother grieve over her child having a cruel nature, because he torments the kitten or kills flies.

On the other hand, do not let her console herself with the reflection that cruelty is a quality inseparable from childhood, and one which he will outgrow as he outgrows others. There is no more insidious vice than cruelty, none with a more deleterious effect on the character.

The child that is suffered, unchecked, to torture an animal, will soon pass from an unconscious to a conscious cruelty; from careless infliction of pain to enjoying the sight of suffering; from the torture of animals to the hurting of smaller brothers and sisters. For the lust of giving pain grows quickly. Sometimes it originates in the love of power. The child knows himself weak and helpless in the hands of his elders, and finds a pleasure in proving himself strong and powerful to a creature feebler than himself; and this is easiest shown by hurting and frightening it.

But kindness must be taught. Weeds only are self-sown; we need but leave the garden uncared for, and before long we find it overgrown with weeds. But we must sow and plant and tend with ceaseless care, if we would have our garden filled with sweet flowers and fruit.—The Humanitarian, London.

A VEXED QUESTION SETTLED AT LAST

There has been a great deal of controversy, some of it decidedly acrimonious, as to what nation won the war. France claimed the honor because the war was fought mainly on her soil, which she defended to the death, finally checking the onslaught of the victorious Germans. England won it with her fleet and Italy by occupying the attention of the Austrian armies while the other Allies took care of the French and Belgian line. Belgium won it because she held Germany in check long enough to enable France to complete the mobilization of her armies. But President Wilson says America won the war with her fresh young manhood and wealth of supplies after the Allies were beaten and discouraged. But after all does it make much difference and is it worth arguing about? The war was won by united effort under the incomparable Marshal Foch. All had a part in it. But the great outstanding fact is—the war was won.

MEXICO MUST BEHAVE HEREAFTER

The President is at home again after two trips across the sea to the Old World and several months spent in consultation over the peace treaty and League of Nations, and besides the vast accumulation of domestic business, he finds confronting him the problem of Mexico, with its tangled governmental affairs, continuous revolutions and repeated outrages against American lives and property. The former timorous and vacillating policy of the President but emboldened the various factions and all felt that they could rob and murder Americans and Europeans at will. Now England and France have presented a long list of grievances against Mexico and they insist on America redressing them, under the terms of the Monroe doctrine. So something has to be done. An occupation of principal ports and inland cities, similar to the plan followed in Cuba after the Spanish-American war, is contemplated, to be continued until a stable government is firmly established. Then immediate evacuation is to follow. Some such plan as this seems imperative. If only congress will insist upon it that no exploiting by American capitalists and predatory companies be permitted, and that the lands and properties be handed back intact when an equitable government is established, all will be well.

NEWSPAPER ADS GET QUICK ACTION

Here is a contribution to the advertising literature of the day in the form of a folder put out by the ad bureau of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association:

My stenographer is an intelligent young woman.

Women do most of the buying and advertisers strive to interest our wives, mothers and sisters.

Remembering this, I asked her what she thought about various advertisements. She said:

"Ads in the newspapers always make me think of quick action. Other kinds of ads make me think of going through a museum—I am interested in everything I see, but I don't want to do anything but look."

Striking answer—wasn't it?

Newspaper advertisements are used to get action.

Action with the consumer who buys across the counter.

Action with the retailer who knows the consumer will buy.

The whole atmosphere of the newspaper is action. The news of the hour, which it prints daily, radiates life and activity—things done and doing today.

Local merchants tell in the newspaper's columns interesting things to bring customers to the stores today and tomorrow.

"Do it now" is the keynote.

National advertisers who use newspaper space benefit by this atmosphere of instant decision.

This is one of the many reasons for the supremacy of the newspaper as a national advertising medium.

MONEY IN RUSSIA

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 9.—The bolshevik monetary system is probably the most spectacular financial experiment in history. At present it is a neck and neck race between the printing presses and the decreasing value of the ruble, as evidenced by prices, which are soaring steadily higher.

The bolsheviks began their financial experiment with the following idea in mind. They said money was the source of all evil, since it represented wealth. According to the bolshevik creed, individual wealth is bad. It causes luxury and privilege, they said. So the bolsheviks decided to ultimately abolish money.

The bolsheviks had to tolerate money since the people had a quantity of it and refused to countenance its abolition outright. Money was needed to win support and build up the bolshevik governmental machine.

Then some bolshevik had a happy idea, which was readily adopted, it was to print more paper money, and print it in such enormous quantities that the government could not possibly be short of funds.

Since the bolshevik government had confiscated everything and therefore owned everything in Russia, it could print money without bothering to provide for special securities, the leaders reasoned. Hence money was not numbered serially. Nobody knows how much exists.

The paper ruble is decreasing in value. But that fulfills the original idea. Eventually the ruble may be worth nothing. Then nobody will want rubles, says the bolshevik. They claim that money will then automatically disappear. Thus it is only a question of speeding up the printing presses.

In the first place, prices soar as money decreases in value. To meet the cost of living, wages are raised by the unions almost monthly. The industrial unions dictate the wages in Russia.

Even with the rapidly rising wages it is difficult for the workman to buy the necessary food, especially if he has a family. In most families everybody is working.

To make matters more complicated, the peasant is balking at selling his products for bolshevik paper money. The peasant farmer has been the conservative in soviet Russia. He wants to be shown. He is suspicious of this new small-sized money.

So the peasant has insisted on gold or money of the old regime, in exchange for his products. He cannot buy clothes and implements, since none are manufactured. He refuses to hoard anything but the old style money, and he already has a good share of that in his possession. The peasant does not subscribe to the communist doctrine that the government should own everything, and sees no reason why he should give up his products for either credit or paper which will buy practically nothing.

In the cities the bolshevik government met a similar situation with regard to the shop-keepers by means of confiscation. But the government fears to confiscate from the farmer. The peasants are too numerous, and would resist the plan too strenuously. So far the government has been meeting the situation by paying enormous prices for products, which it sells the co-operatives at a loss. The loss is made up by printing more money.

But there is a limit to even that system, and the bolshevik financial "experts" are up against it. One of them in seriousness told the United Press correspondent, "If we could only get some new and modern printing presses from America, we would have the problem solved."

The government has requisitioned all the bourgeoisie newspaper presses, but shortage of machinery, ink and paper still hampers these printing press finances.

The bolshevik ruble is a small note, about two inches long and an inch and a half wide. The most common pieces are the twenty and forty ruble amounts. More recently one, two, three, and five ruble pieces have been added.

These rubles, especially the twenties, are printed in big pages like stamps, except that there are no perforations between the individual notes. They are spent in pages very often.

It is a common sight to see a commissaire reach in a desk drawer and pull out a page of rubles and hand it to a subordinate, giving orders to run out and buy something. A hundred or two hundred rubles are torn off with the finger nails leaving an irregular margin, often tearing the notes themselves, when a bill is paid. Big bills are usually paid with strips or pages of rubles. Only the poor have time to tear off individual notes. For small change, stamps are used. Oddly these are the same stamps used by the old regime, and bear the bust of a czar engraved on them. The new government has not been able to have new engravings of Lenine or Marx made up. On the back of the stamps is a printed statement that they are to be used as money.

Stamps have lost their former use. You don't need to put a stamp on a letter to send it. Just put it in the box. When the postoffice has to pay the bills or runs short of funds, it calls up the treasury printing office and orders a few thousand sheets of rubles, just as does the army, the factory manager, or the head of any department when pay-day rolls around.

DEATH OF THE OLD RULER

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 9.—The bolsheviks are naive and almost child-like in their explanation of the execution of the Czar and members of the royal family. Of the Czar's family the bolsheviks claim they do not know anything.

No effort is made to conceal the details of the Czar's death. The United Press correspondent asked one of the men high in the bolshevik foreign office for the truth about the Czar. His story was neither long nor complicated.

"The Czar was made prisoner by the bolsheviks at the overthrow of Kerensky and was taken to a small town in northwestern Siberia," said the bolshevik official. "He was kept there for some time, until an uprising occurred in the vicinity. His captors feared the reactionaries would take the Czar and declare him ruler again. So he was moved southward to a small hamlet in the Ural Mountains. There he was kept until the Czecho-Slovaks under Koltchak reached the proximity, and there was again danger of Nicholas being recaptured and declared Czar. The bolsheviks guarding him realized this danger.

"So one night they executed him. They did it entirely without our knowledge and against our orders. The only authority they had was that of the local soviet. We learned of the execution some days after it was done.

"The local soviet sent in the orders for execution, and asked us to approve them. Since the Czar was already executed, we decided that we might as well approve of the local soviet's action, so we did, and the Czar's execution was given the O. K. of the national soviet congress."

The Moscow bolsheviks claim they have no information regarding the fate of the Czarina and the children of the Czar, all of whom were taken prisoners with Nicholas. They probably were kept with him, and were executed at the same time, admit the bolsheviks.

The bolsheviks claim that the local soviet acted as a court to try the Czar before its members declared themselves for his execution. His death is justified on the grounds that he was a danger to bolshevism and would always be an influence to reaction.

Some of the details of the Czar's death came to light when two Russians who were present at the death scene in the Urals appeared in Berlin and told part of their stories to members of the Allied missions there.

These Russians who had escaped from the bolsheviks, had in their possession small bits of cloth, which they claimed were remnants from the clothes of the former Russian royalty. The soldiers claimed to have seen the executions, not only of Nicholas, but of his wife and children. They said it was cruel and brutal beyond description.

Grand Duke Nicholas is thought by the bolsheviks to be living in the Crimea. The bolsheviks regard him as a dangerous personality, and would like to bring him before a soviet tribunal.

Executions and imprisonments in soviet Russia have done much to rid the country of political leaders dangerous to the bolsheviks. The head sovietists have shown rare diligence and judgment in seizing the men likely to be dangerous.

According to the bolsheviks, the executions in Russia have not reached the figures given out by their enemies. The bolsheviks testify to the statement that not more than five thousand people have been actually killed in the entire revolution.

However, most of these were executions. The bolsheviks claim that every one executed had a trial before a tribunal. The tribunal consisted of three communists. The system of trial by tribunal is still in practice.

Most of the executions were during the Red Terror, according to the Moscow leaders. They justify the Red Terror, on the grounds that it was the only means of bringing peace in the land, when counter plots were threatening Lenine and other bolshevik leaders.

The Red Terror put the fear of disorder in the hearts of the Russian people. It was the means by which the bolsheviks seized a strangle hold on the country. It also enabled them to either jail or execute every political opponent of any importance inside Russia.

Only recently have any of these political refugees been allowed out of prison. They are still closely watched. In Petrograd the United Press correspondent had dinner one evening with a baron who had just been released. He was ravenously hungry and almost out of his mind. His spirit was wild, and he looked for death any moment, and welcomed it as a relief from the terror under which he lived.

Though trials by tribunal are common and are going on daily, the death sentence for ordinary crimes has largely been abolished for the time being, at least publicly. Crimes are punished with long imprisonments in dungeons.
